NAVODILA ZA OCENJEVANJE

Petek, 26. avgust 2022

SPLOŠNA MATURA

Moderirana različica

SPLOŠNA NAVODILA

- Vsak pravilen odgovor je vreden 1 točko.
- Če je pravilen samo del rešitve, ocenjevalec kandidatu dodeli 0 točk.
- Kadar kandidat zapiše dve rešitvi, od katerih je ena napačna in ni ustrezno označena kot taka (tj. prečrtana), ocenjevalec kandidatu dodeli 0 točk.
- Skrajšane glagolske oblike, z izjemo zvezze »can't«, se štejejo kot dve besedi.
- Pri navajanju rešitev oklepaj pomeni, da je odgovor pravilen tudi brez tega dela, npr. »having dinner (with Dr Gerada)«; pravilno je torej tako »having dinner with Dr Gerada« kot »having dinner«, poševnica pa pomeni, da je pravilna katerakoli od besed na vsaki strani poševnice, ki sta enakovredni, npr. »visiting/meeting Dr Gerada«; pravilno je torej ali »visiting Dr Gerada« ali »meeting Dr Gerada«.
- Ocenjevalci po lastni presoji upoštevajo tudi smiselno pravilne rešitve, ki niso navedene v Navodilih za ocenjevanje.

IZPITNA POLA 1A (Bralno razumevanje) in IZPITNA POLA 2 (Slušno razumevanje)

- Ocenjevalci ne odštevajo točk za slovnične napake in nepravilno napisane besede (npr. »occurr« namesto »occur«).
- Ocenjevalci ne upoštevajo napačno napisanih besed, ki se pomensko razlikujejo od pravilnih rešitev (npr. »hopping« namesto »hoping«).
- Pri nalogi s kratkimi odgovori (bralno razumevanje OR in VR) ocenjevalci ne bodo upoštevali odgovorov, ki so dolgi šest besed ali več. Skrajšane glagolske oblike z izjemo zvezze can't se štejejo kot dve besedi.

IZPITNA POLA 1B (Poznavanje in raba jezika)

- V tem delu izpitne pole ocenujemo poznavanje in rabo jezika, zato ocenjevalci ne upoštevajo napačno napisanih besed niti slovnično oporečnih rešitev.

Transkripciji

Section A

Alexandra Wilson

Presenter: I'm Emily Webb, and today I'm speaking to a young barrister who's been making the headlines here in the UK. Alexandra Wilson is black, she's 25 years old, and because of that last week she got mistaken for the defendant in court three times in the same day. She received an apology from Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunals service, but said about the experience: "I don't expect to have to constantly justify my existence at work." She works as a criminal and family barrister, and her career so far has already been marked by extraordinary achievements. But last week wasn't the first time she was mistaken for the defendant.

Alexandra Wilson: Sadly, that's a reflection of our criminal justice system – that there is a disproportionate number of black defendants going through our criminal justice system and not enough black lawyers. So the assumption when, you know, a member of staff sees a young black person in court is not that they're the lawyer. As lawyers, we're meant to represent the whole of society, and I don't think yet we're at the point where lawyers do represent everyone in society, and the vast majority of lawyers still come from quite middle class backgrounds, we're still not ethnically diverse. You know, the majority of lawyers, again, are still white, so there definitely is still a problem with diversity in the courtroom.

Presenter: So you are 25. You've been working as a barrister for two years. Was that a career path that looked obvious in your family when you were growing up?

Alexandra Wilson: Absolutely not! I think growing up, I didn't even know what a barrister was and I didn't grow up knowing any lawyers, my parents are teachers and they went to university as mature students, as adults, and they were very, very aspirational, and they really did encourage me to do whatever I wanted to do. So, I never felt for my family that I couldn't do what I wanted to do, but I just didn't know what a barrister was.

Presenter: And you grew up in this place called Woodford. What sort of a place is it?

Alexandra Wilson: Woodford's quite a diverse area. London is, you know, a lot more diverse than other parts of England. And Woodford is in East London. So, where I went to school, I mixed with kids from all different kinds of backgrounds, so all different kinds of social backgrounds, but also kids of all different races.

Presenter: And your grandparents came over from the Caribbean as part of the Windrush generation, which is this group of people who came over to the UK post-war from the Caribbean. When they came, what do you think was the appeal of the UK for them?

Alexandra Wilson: Well, they were certainly told that, you know, England thought of them as an extension of, of England. You know, they were, they were English. They thought they were coming here to help with the post-war effort to kind of rebuild England. And I always think it must've been very difficult to go from, I've been to Jamaica a few times and it's a beautiful country and it's lovely and hot; so lots of beaches and to have come from there to England where it rains a lot, you know, the beaches aren't quite so pretty. It must have been quite difficult to give that up and to, to have transitioned to a life here. They must have really believed that it was going to be something great. I think when they came here, it was not quite what they'd been promised. They were definitely treated quite badly. My grandad did a range of jobs. He was a postman for a while, he was a milkman, and my nan, she was a nurse; but both of them were qualified in Jamaica and came here, and obviously all their qualifications they had to redo. And I think the hardest part...

Section BThe Painted Veil

Presenter: With me today, the author Alexander McCall Smith. With Alexander is the physics professor, solar researcher, and avid science communicator Lucie Greene. Lucie Greene, The Painted Veil, Somerset Maugham. What did you make of it?

Lucie Green: I was really captivated by this book. I have to say I hadn't read any of Maugham's books before and I raced through this one. I literally couldn't put it down. And I loved that intimate opening where you've got the three main characters and, you know, as you say, Kitty, her husband and the lover. And I think that kind of intensity that comes from focusing on those three characters really, really drew me in and, you know, such a descriptive writing style. But there was also an aspect; I found it a little bit jarring from a modern perspective, too, because, you know, it's set in in the time of the British Empire, colonial Hong Kong. And I have to say, you know, Kitty, the main character is, she is so sort of easily fooled by this flattering, the flattery of this vain man. And her character, I guess, was sort of, you know, one of a woman being emotionally overwhelmed and sort of feeling faint and sort of crying a lot. And so that side of the book, I sort of felt, it felt like I was watching a black and white movie and it was set, you know, was written in the 1920s. So it is a book of its time. But the bigger themes of reflecting on your life, you know, the ability to change, assessing your morals actually also made the book timeless. So I kind of, I came full circle: I loved it, and then I thought, oh, a bit jarring, and then I reflected on it at the end and thoroughly enjoyed it.

Presenter: It's interesting you say that Lucie because I was really pleasantly surprised by this book. I haven't read anything by Somerset Maugham since I was about 14 or 15 and I'd kind of filed him away as dated, popular novelist. But I actually didn't find it too jarring at all; there is something about the style, which is a bit dated. But I thought that the attitudes in the book towards the position of women, the attitude towards colonialism, the attitude towards class snobbery was all really very, very modern. I mean, it felt very today. And as you say, it is absolutely a page turner. I mean, I just wondered, Alexander McCall Smith, since this is such a favourite of yours, whether when you started writing fiction, you used Somerset Maugham as a model in any way?

Alexander McCall Smith: No, not really. But it's extraordinary. You know, how you sometimes are prejudiced against a writer for no real reason and you feel: "I'm not going to read that person." For some time I felt that about Maugham. And I didn't read Maugham until I was in my mid to late 20s. There was something about the idea of reading Somerset Maugham. Maybe it's what you allude to, Harriet, that he was regarded as a middlebrow popular novelist, very successful, not the sort of book that one would want to read if one wanted to read a serious novel. I was very interested in what has been said, what both you and Lucie have said about the, the dated aspect of the, of the book. There are one or two places where that really, really leaps out of the page and bites you. For example, where Kitty is talking about the children whom she meets in the hospital and she meets a child who has a very serious medical problem and she describes the child or the novelist describes the child as "it". It really is the most extraordinary moment in the, in the book.
