SARAH'S LUCKY SHOES

“Whatever are you doing up there? We’ve got to leave in ten minutes,” called out Sarah’s mum. “Come down now and have some food.” Sarah ran down to the kitchen. “I can’t find my pink ballet shoes anywhere,” she cried. “And I’ve got to have them for the audition.” Her ballet school were going to put on a show and Sarah had been hoping that this year she would get a special part. She had been practising hard for weeks. “You didn’t leave them in Grandma’s car last night, did you?” asked her mum.

Sarah’s hand shot up to her face. “Oh, no!” she gasped in horror, as she remembered how her grandma had collected her from the ballet school yesterday. Her pink ballet shoes must have fallen under the seat. “What about your black ones?” asked her mum. “You could wear those.” Sarah cringed at the idea. “I can’t, Mum. Everyone will laugh.” “Well, it’s no good ringing Grandma. She’s already left for her holidays. Your pink ballet shoes are probably a good hundred miles away by now.” “We could buy some new pink ones. We go past the shop on the way to the ballet school,” said Sarah suddenly. “Sarah, don’t be silly. There’s nothing wrong with your old black shoes,” said Sarah’s mum. “Besides, we’re not made of money.” She fetched Sarah’s black shoes from the cupboard. “Come on now, or you’ll be late.” Sarah stared down glumly at her black shoes as her mum drove her to the ballet school.

“Oooh! Look at Sarah!” she heard Donna whisper as she went into the big hall. Watching the others dance, Sarah kept her feet tucked well back under her chair. If only her grandma would suddenly walk into the room with my pink shoes, she thought miserably. Sarah felt her face turn red as she stood up and walked into the middle of the room. Mrs Collins gave Sarah an encouraging smile.

Sarah took a deep breath. She knew that she was going to have to keep her mind on her dancing and nothing else. Gritting her teeth, she raised one arm gracefully into position. Waiting to begin, she tried very hard to remember everything that Mrs Collins had told her. The music started. She felt it lifting her into the air, as she lightly danced across the floor. She twirled and stretched, leapt and floated. She was in another world! When, at last, her dance ended, she held her final position like a statue. It was quite a few moments before she heard Mrs Collins’ voice speaking to her. “That was wonderful, Sarah! The best you’ve ever done! I think you should be the fairy queen.” Sarah blinked as she heard the other girls clapping loudly. She was overjoyed. “Must be something to do with those black dancing shoes,” laughed Mrs Collins with a tiny twinkle in her eye. Sarah looked down at her feet. She’d forgotten all about her shoes, and suddenly, it didn’t matter. Mrs Collins had just given her the leading part!

FUNNY WORLD

- A UFO is short for Unidentified Flying Object, or rather something you can see in the sky but cannot explain. It is believed that UFOs come from the universe. About 3 million people claim that they have seen UFOs. Some have taken pictures of strange lights in the sky, others have seen flying saucers in fields and a Russian artist claims to have been kidnapped by a UFO.
- B Wall Street is the commercial centre of New York, and the rest of America too! The name 'Wall Street' comes from the wall which the Dutch settler Peter Stuyvesant built in 1627, to protect the Dutch from the Indians. By the 1920s New York had become one of the world's major financial centres, with an important stock market situated in Wall Street.
- C The Oscars are the awards given each year by the Academy of Motion Pictures to the best films, actors, music, sound and other effects. The award was given the name 'Oscar' when a librarian at the Academy thought that the statue looked like her uncle Oscar!
- D The Red Arrows are the Royal Air Force's aerobatic team. Originally there were seven planes in the team but two more were added in order to make the Diamond Nine formation possible, which is now the Red Arrows' speciality. They use Hawk planes that can travel at up to 360 miles per hour. During shows the planes keep only 10 feet apart.
- E There are homeless people in all the big cities of the world. This problem is especially evident in cities like London and New York where the difference between the extremely rich and the extremely poor is all the more obvious. The magazine, The Big Issue, was set up in London, to provide employment and money for the homeless who write and sell it.
- F For Americans, the Indy 500 is much more than just a car race, it is a special event. The race is held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in May, and half a million people go to see it. The winner of the race gets a bottle of milk – a good, healthy American drink, not a bottle of champagne like in Formula 1!
- G One of the things that people think of when they think of Britain is a 'gentleman'. He works in 'The City', the financial centre of London. He goes to 'The Club' where he plays bridge, reads the newspaper or has lunch. During the weekend he goes to the country to get some fresh air and to forget about city life.
