The “Angelic” faces of Racism

Adapted from <http://www.emma.tv/music/news/>, 5 October 2005

It is a well known fact that racism is still a worldwide problem, however things seem to be getting worse in America with the new face of America’s white supremacist movement and a new band, Prussian Blue.

Lamb and Lynx Gaede, known as Prussian Blue are the twin teenage pop stars whose music is less than innocent. The blonde haired, blue-eyed 13-year-olds may look a picture of innocence, yet their songs are more sinister and preach messages of racial hatred.

Prussian Blue are a “white power” band from Bakersfield, California, and are currently recording their second album. They are known in America as a sinister version of the Olsen-Twins, yet could not be more different if they tried.

Whereas the Olsen Twins are squeaky clean child actresses of the 1990s, Prussian Blue’s back catalogue of songs include, Sacrifice, a tribute to Hitler’s deputy, Rudolf Hess that praises him as a “man of peace who wouldn’t give up”.

Prussian Blue are worryingly attracting more and more fans among young white nationalists. They are also thought of highly by white supremacists, such as David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan member and presidential candidate and they are used to gaining support.

Lamb Gaede plays the guitar, Lynx Gaede plays the violin, and since the age of 9 they have been entertaining all-white crowds with their controversial music. Prussian Blue have played for the neo-Nazi National Alliance at Holocaust-denial events; i.e. they have also performed at festivals such as Folk the System, their on-stage antics include executing the Sieg Heil salutes and singing lyrics such as, “Strike force! White survival. Strike force! Yeah!”

Lynx Gaede has said, “We are proud of being white. We want our people to stay white...we don’t want to just be, you, know, a big muddle. We just want to preserve our race”.

Critics believe that they have been brainwashed by their mother. April Gaede, aged 38, is a former member of the National Alliance and brought up her daughters on racist beliefs using textbooks from the 1950s. Lamb and Lynx Gaede’s father, who is separated from their mother, is said to share similar beliefs and has a swastika on his belt buckle.

Ted Shaw, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Coloured People’s Legal Defence Fund, said, “It breaks my heart to see those girls spewing out that kind of garbage”.

Prussian Blue are under contract by white supremacist label Resistance Records, and are just one of a number of extremists pop bands. Others include blue-Eyed Devils and Angry Aryans. Prussian Blue’s first album included a song called Aryan Man, which encourages the Aryan man to awake and “turn that fear to hate”.

Not afraid of controversy, Prussian Blue stipulated in an interview recently that money they donated to victims of Hurricane Katrina should only go to whites. Furthermore, in an interview for Viceland magazine, when asked what was the “most important social issue facing the white race right now”, they replied, “Not having enough white babies born to replace ourselves and generally not having good quality white people being born”.

Excessive load on the body

Adapted from http://www.bbc.co.uk/health/healthy_living/fitness/injuries_riskextrinsic1.shtml

The tissues of the body are potentially capable of withstanding considerable stress. However, tissues that have not been accustomed ___0___ such forces will not have adapted to endure them and are therefore likely to be injured when they are applied. Certain types of movement demand that the body either develops force rapidly or must control force very quickly. Sprinting and jumping, ___1___ example, require the muscles to develop big forces very quickly to 'power' the action and also to control the limbs and body with each foot contact or landing. Consequently, this type of training or activity must be gradually introduced ___2___ part of a training programme, preferably following a period of several weeks of general training.

A sports coach or instructor will know the demands of the sport and will usually be able to assess your current level of fitness. As a result, they are more likely to be able to suggest the amount of training (in terms of intensity, volume, duration, frequency, recovery) that you are capable of at the moment and the rate at ___3___ you should progress.

If your sport or activity involves impact (running, jumping, etc.) then wearing appropriate footwear and exercising on a suitable surface are extremely important. The most appropriate footwear will often depend upon your walk and joint mechanics. ___4___, the shock absorption, stability and support characteristics required of sports footwear will differ according to sport, technique and bodyweight. Similarly, certain surfaces are associated with overuse injury. ___5___ tend to be the harder surfaces.

However, should you suddenly change from exercising or training on one surface, to exercising or training on another (grass to road, or road to track) you may ___6___ be inviting an injury. This is not only because of the difference in impact, but also because the feedback from muscles and joints will be different and the body often needs a couple of sessions to work out precisely how to control ___7___ difference in loading and any changes in joint position.

It goes without saying that a sudden change in footwear may also result in injury. The answer is to work new shoes and surfaces into your programme gradually over the course of ___8___ training sessions.

THE MAORIS OF NEW ZEALAND

by J. Meyers & N. Raistrick

Adapted from Current, No. 1 September/October 2000

Who are the Maoris?

The Maori people are the original New Zealanders who lived there for centuries before _____ 0 _____ settlers thought of going there. They are famous for their tribal dances and songs, and for their distinctive _____ 1 _____ dress. Their name comes from a flightless bird they used to hunt which was called the moa. The word maori originally meant 'moa hunter'.

0 EUROPE
1 TRADITION

Had Maoris always lived in New Zealand?

According to legend, they arrived there around 1350 AD from Polynesia. Due to cramped conditions and a _____ 2 _____ of food, they launched 10 great canoes and set off for the virtually uninhabited island, which is known in Maori as Aotearoa, or 'island of the long white cloud'. In theory every Maori can trace their ancestry back to one of those 10 canoes.

2 SHORT

Is much known about Maori culture?

Yes, much is known about Maoritanga (Maori culture), as they developed a rich oral culture based on story telling and chants: as well as telling stories about myths and ancestors, the Maori people love to carve; their _____ 3 _____ wood and bone carvings often tell a story. An important aspect of Maori life is the marae, or meeting place where kinship, friendship, love, spirituality and life-force are celebrated.

3 BEAUTY

What is all this tongue sticking out business?

It is known as a 'haka'. It was a way of challenging an opposing tribe and chanting in a menacing way. This was often accompanied by foot stamping and arm actions. Today, the All Blacks (the New Zealand rugby team) perform a haka before their matches.

Did the Maoris have a bad relationship with European settlers?

Not at first. When British _____ 4 _____ Captain Cook claimed the island for Britain, he created a good relationship with the 'natives'. However after a while, the settlers introduced disease and prostitution to the area. They killed all the whales and seals and tried to collect the heads of Maori chiefs.

4 EXPLORE

So the Maoris suffered?

Yes. For a few hundred years they saw much of their land taken over by Europeans and their population reduced by eighty percent. The Treaty of Waitangi was signed in 1840 and gave the Maoris full rights to their land, forests and treasured _____ 5 _____. It also gave them all the rights and privileges of British subjects.

5 POSSESS

Did the Waitangi Treaty help?

Despite the egalitarian language in the treaty, it was _____ 6 _____ ignored. This led to dissatisfaction amongst Maoris and eventually war resulting in the confiscation of much Maori land in the 1860s.

6 LARGE

Have the Maoris managed to get land back since then?

Partly. Tribal leaders continued to push for their rights, and in 1985 they managed to persuade the New Zealand government to start making _____ 7 _____ in compensation for land that had been illegally taken from them.
